Dear Ms. Johnson:

On behalf of EPA CAN DO, a community development corporation, I am writing to urge the Department of Treasury to address four components of its proposed rule on Electron Funds Transfer 1999 (31 CFR Part 208).

Treasury's Regulatory Role.

- Voluntary Accounts.
The law directs Treasury to provide all recipients who will receive federal payments electronically access to an account at a financial institution at a reasonable cost and with the same consumer protections available to others. Treasury should regulate all accounts established by recipients to ensure that recipients:
(1) have accounts at regulated financial institutions.
(2) that fees charged are reasonable and affordable over the long-term, and
(3) that consumer protections apply to all accounts transactions.
- Non-Banks.
Treasury must not allow EFT partnerships between banks and check cashiers. A system where funds are electronically transferred to regulated financial institutions, but recipients can only access their funds through check cashiers is NOT acceptable and contradicts the provisions of the statute.

Electronic Transfer Accounts (ETAs) .

ETAs should be free of monthly service charges and offer the same features and protections as current mainstream checking accounts. These accounts should include checks or money orders, ATM cards, debit cards, customer support and accept additional deposits. We believe that all recipients of federal benefits should have the option of choosing and ETA.

Waivers.

We are pleased with Treasury's proposal to allow recipients to self-certify their eligibility for waivers. However, the waiver provisions must be broadened to allow waivers for hardships posed by mental disabilities, literacy concerns, or language barriers. Financial hardship waivers should be available to anyone who finds it too expensive to maintain a bank account to receive benefits, not just those without bank accounts. Recipients should be able to receive waivers at any point, in case of an unforeseen physical disability or other hardship.

Public Education Campaign.

We understand that the Treasury Department will launch a public education campaign to inform recipients of EFT 99 and to encourage them to receive their benefits eclectically. It is critical that this campaign informs people of ALL their options, including waivers, obtaining and ETA account through Treasury, and the temporary waiver whereby recipients without bank accounts continue receiving paper checks until the ETA account is available. Recipients who are frightened into opening accounts before the ETA is available, could easily fall prey to the abusive practices of check cashers or open bank accounts that are too costly. the information on EFT 99 must be clear and available in appropriate languages.

We urge you to take action on these critical issues. Thank you for you attention to this matter.

Sincerely,

Marcia Fitten
